

Birds and animals seen on the OLCT Lohmann-Buck-Twining Preserve

When the land trust acquired the LBT property last fall I decided to keep a list of all the wildlife that that I saw and recognized there for one year. I live nearby and have included LBT in my morning walks, probably 200 or more times during the year.

I usually walk it early in the morning and that can be both an advantage and a disadvantage to seeing what is there. Mammals such as River Otter and Coyote are best seen early in the morning. Migrant and nesting birds are also more vocal in the early hours of the day. Butterflies, on the other hand, are more apt to be encountered during the warmer hours.

I'm sure there are more migrant songbirds passing through the woodlands and possibly rails and bitterns in the marsh along the Lieutenant River that I have not seen. The list below is what I have seen, Birds, mammals, butterflies, amphibians and reptiles while walking Lohmann.
